Creating a Modern Countryside

2011-11-01

in the early 1900s british columbia embarked on a brief but intense effort to manufacture a modern countryside the government wished to reward great war veterans with new lives settlers would benefit from living in a rural community considered a more healthy and moral alternative to urban life but the fundamental reason for the land resettlement project was the rise of progressive or new liberal thinking as reformers advocated an expanded role for the state in guaranteeing the prosperity and economic security of its citizens james murton examines how this process unfolded and demonstrates how the human environment relationship of the early twentieth century shaped the province as it is today

Dancing Around the Elephant

2007-01-01

a generation of canadian historians has viewed the mid twentieth century as an era when canada gave ground to the united states in most areas of foreign trade policy in dancing around the elephant bruce muirhead elegantly and cogently disputes this view drawing on extensive archival research muirhead notes a number of cases where canadian policy makers actually got the better of their american counterparts such as the auto pact and examines contextual reasons for the pessimistic view of canada s trade position and hostile scepticism of american dominance the rise of canadian nationalism the growth of anti americanism based largely on the american role in vietnam and the election of pierre elliot Trudeau as prime minister in 1968 muirhead also dispels the myth that the poor relationship between prime minister john dieffenbaker and president john f kennedy served to wreak havoc on canadian american relations clearly demonstrating its lack of effect on trade patterns while not disregarding a number of trade failures particularly with the united kingdom and europe dancing around the elephant refutes the position of those who question canada s economic independence in the mid century and will prove tremendously controversial with economic historians and those who study canadian nationalism

both psychoanalysis and neurology have left equally prominent marks on the history of the twentieth century yet they have been interpreted in vastly different ways the two fields appear to manifest an insurmountable cartesian dualism one representing a psychological the other a somatic approach to understanding personhood and subjectivity given this apparent opposition it is remarkable that both trace intellectual and practical roots back to the same neuropsychiatry that was dominant in the german speaking world of the late nineteenth century katja guenther investigates the significance of this historical connection and in doing so not only reframes the relationship between psychoanalysis and the neurosciences but also provides resources for thinking about how they developed as independent fields localization and its discontents transforms how we think about their theory and practice by understanding the historical connections and surprising parallels in their past development we are newly positioned to reassess the assumptions that seem to determine their future
