testing electron phonon coupling for the superconductivity in Jun 21 2023

here using 7 ev laser based angle resolved photoemission spectroscopy and eliashberg function analysis we determine an intermediate  $\lambda$  0.45 0.6 at  $T$  6 K for both  $sb_{5p}$  and  $v_{3d}$  electronic bands which can support a conventional superconducting transition temperature on the same magnitude of experimental value in  $csv_{3sb_{5}}$ cover microleds produce light by the same process that their larger led cousins use when electrons and holes in a semiconductor material recombine photons are emitted but compared with conventional leds and other light emitters microleds are much brighter an advantage that has drawn the interest of makers of augmented and virtual reality headsets whose displays need to compete ## pseudo scalar meson spectral properties in the chiral Nov 14 2022

determining the type of excitations that can exist in a thermal medium is key to understanding how hadronic matter behaves at extreme temperatures in this work we study this question for pseudo scalar mesons comprised of light strange and strange strange quarks analysing how their low energy spectral properties are modified as one passes through the high temperature chiral crossover region
