in from migrants to refugees jill rosenthal tells the history of how rwandan migrants in a tanzanian border district became considered either citizens or refugees as nation state boundaries solidified in the wake of decolonization outlining the process by which people who have long lived and circulated across the rwanda tanzania border came to have a national identity rosenthal reveals humanitarian aid s central role in the ideological processes of decolonization and nation building from precolonial histories to the first rwandan refugee camps during decolonization in the 1960s to the massive refugee camps in the 1990s rosenthal highlights the way that this area became a testing ground for novel forms of transnational aid to refugees that had global implications as local and national actors refugees and international officials all attempted to control the lives and futures of refugee groups they contested the authority of the nation state and the international refugee regime this history rosenthal demonstrates illuminates how tensions between state and international actors divided people who share a common history culture and language across national borders making vancouver explores social relationships in vancouver from 1863 to 1913 it considers how urbanization structured social boundaries among burrard inlet s increasingly large population and is premised on the belief that in studying social boundaries historians must abandon single category forms of analysis and build into their research strategies the capacity to explore complexity robert mcdonald thus traces the relationship between the two forms of identify class and status for the whole of vancouver society the book starts with the years when settlement on burrard inlet centred around two lumber mills explores periods of elite dominance of city institutions and then of growing social and political conflict following the arrival of the railway examines the heightening of class tensions at the turn of the century charts economic growth during the boom years before the war and concludes with three chapters on the tripartite status hierarchy that emerged in concert with that of a class dichotomy it reveals a western city that was neither egalitarian nor closed to opportunity vancouver up to the pre war crash of 1913 was open and dynamic the rapidity of growth easy access to resources narrow industrial base and influence of ethnicity and race softened the thrust towards class division inherent in capitalism far more powerful in directing social relations was the quest for status creating a social structure that was no less hierarchical than that predicted by class theory but much more fluid the social boundary that separated the working class from others is revealed as a division that for much of the pre war boom period divided vancouver society more fundamentally than the boundary separating labour from capital
